

ACTRESS PAULA SAILS TO FIGHT FOR VINDICATION

Sobbingly Begs Fair-Minded
Americans to Withhold Judgment.

WILL RETURN, SHE SAYS.

To Press Action Against Miller,
the Man Who Caused
Her Deportation.

Weeping until she became almost hysterical, Paula Klippenburg, the Viennese actress, who has been ordered deported after a series of hearings before the immigration authorities, was led to the Hamburg-American line pier today accompanied only by Edwin S. Merrill, her attorney and an inspector from Ellis Island.

She boarded the Deutschland and is now far on her way from Horace E. Miller, the Newark man against whom she brought suit for $25,000 for breach of promise. She purchased a first-class passage aboard the Deutschland yesterday, when told by an Evening World reporter that she was to be deported.

Miss Klippenburg's breakdown followed a reference to the kindness of the American people and their consideration of her case. She sobbed her regret that Miller's alleged betrayal should have placed her in her present light. She said through an interpreter that she would vindicate herself and begged the fair-minded Americans to withhold judgment.

When she reaches Paris she will take steps to learn the source of the cablegram purporting to come from the Prefect of Police of Vienna. She declares it a forgery. She is supposed to be engaged to M. Abouf, a wealthy banker and jeweler of Paris.

Will Come Back.
"There is one thing I want emphatically to say," she declared, with tears in her eyes. "I shall return to fight my case against Horace E. Miller. I have sued him for $25,000 and I will be in your court when that case is called. I lose my head for it."

"This man, after winning my love and confidence, and deceiving me as few men have ever deceived a loving girl, has now had me sent out of your country like a leper or murderer. We were together for a part of two years, and then I discovered he was a married man with a daughter as old as myself and cast him off."

"I came here to make him atone as much as money could atone, but explained to him at the office of his attorney, to which I had been lured to be arrested by immigration officials, that I did not wish to punish his innocent wife and daughter. I told them he must settle with me quietly and save his family from shame and sorrow."

"But what was my reward? A law was found which denied this country to an undesirable alien, and I was made its victim. Mr. Miller was my accuser and described me as a vile woman. I was returned to Ellis Island a prisoner."

Wants Vindication.
"The cablegram used against me before the Board of Inquiry purporting to be from the Vienna Prefect of Police, and saying that I was known in Austria as an improper person, was every word false, and I shall go straight to Vienna and learn its source. I submitted a letter signed by this same Prefect saying I was known only as an actress, but it availed nothing."

"I shall return for vindication as soon as possible."

Miss Klippenburg arrived here Aug. 3 with sixteen trunks, many jewels and several thousand dollars in cash. Under the order of deportation from Washington she would have been returned at the expense of the steamship company that brought her, but she had engaged a passage and obtained formal permission from the immigration department to leave before she knew of the final decision of the officials to deport her.

Since her release from Ellis Island Miss Klippenburg had been at the Astor House, registered as Pauline Schmidt. She expressed the belief that her representatives will have no difficulty in gaining her admission to this country under bond when her case comes to trial.

SPECIAL BULLETIN!

(Thursday, Sept. 26, 1907.)

The World's "tidal wave" of supremacy rises higher and higher. "Results" received by World advertisers and The World's overshadowing New York City circulation—greater than that of ANY TWO OTHER morning newspapers COMBINED—explain it.

14,310

separate advertisements have been printed in The World during the last three weekdays.

1,658 More than were published in the Herald, Sun, Times and Tribune COMBINED.

The World is Mother Earth's FIRST Newspaper.

Deported Actress Who Will Return To Prosecute Suit

Paula Klippenburg.

HAD CASH AND BONDS, BUT PUT GEMS IN PAWN

Jeweller Says "Langdon" Did Not Pay for Rings and Has Him Arrested.

A man who said he was Samuel P. Langdon and lived in Elizabeth, N. J., is a prisoner at Police Headquarters today. Fred Wis, of the jewelry firm of J. Wis & Son, Newark, alleges that Langdon, on Sept. 17, obtained two diamond rings valued at $1,250 at his store and left as security $10,000 first mortgage bonds of the New York and Pittsburgh Air Line Railroad Company.

Yesterday, according to Wis, Langdon telephoned that a clerk he sent with his bonds, and said he would pay for one of the rings and return the other. He also wanted sent over a solitaire ring, a ruby and a gold watch, for which he would pay.

Wis was suspicious, and sent with the clerk, who carried a dummy package, Detective Kuhn, of Newark. They found Langdon, who, the clerk says, promised to pay for the jewelry within twenty-four hours, and was then arrested.

When taken to the Church street police station and searched, detectives found pawn tickets from Philadelphia dated Sept. 18, describing two rings. The amount secured was $500. They also report they found pawn tickets from Philadelphia and Baltimore firms aggregating $3,000, fifty-one bonds of the New York and Pittsburgh Air Line Railroad of a face value of $1,000 each, and $451 in cash.

On the list of officers of the line is John Langdon, of Huntington, Pa., Vice-President and Treasurer. Mr. Langdon said over the telephone at his home in Huntington that he has a brother, Samuel P. Langdon, and didn't know how the possessor of the bonds got them unless he had a right to them. One Samuel P. Langdon, a railroad promoter, is a son of Richard Langdon, who during his lifetime was the wealthiest coal operator in Central Pennsylvania.

Samuel P. Langdon's father's death inherited money and extensive coal interests and built the Altoona and Philadelphia connecting road, which left him almost bankrupt. Last year the road was reorganized under the name of the New York and Pittsburgh Air Line Railroad, when at the head of the Langdon-Wigton Coal Mining Company, had an office here.

When Langdon was president of the United Coaleries Company, with offices in the Drexel Building, Philadelphia, ten years ago, a young woman with whom he had been living was found dead on the floor of her bedroom and Langdon was arrested, but discharged by order of the District Attorney, as there was no evidence against him.

AGED WOMAN KILLED BY AN AUTO TRUCK

In Dodging Car She Stepped in Front of Machine—
Spectators Faint.

Crossing Second avenue at Nineteenth street when traffic was heaviest last evening, was an elderly woman dressed in black silk. While attempting to avoid a car she got in the way of a heavy auto truck of the Vacuum Cleaning Company, No. 47 Fifth avenue. It ran over her, crushing her skull and killing her instantly.

Women on the street and in cars fainted and doctors and nurses from the Skin and Cancer Hospital ran out to attend them.

There was nothing by which the woman could be identified. She was gray-haired, about fifty years old, five feet eight inches tall and weighed 130 pounds. Her clothing was of excellent quality.

Thomas H. Noble, No. 2600 Prospect avenue, the chauffeur, was arrested on the technical charge of manslaughter. Witnesses said that the truck was running at high speed when the accident occurred.

When taken to the Church street police station and searched, detectives found pawn tickets from Philadelphia dated Sept. 18, describing two rings. The amount secured was $500. They also report they found pawn tickets from Philadelphia and Baltimore firms aggregating $3,000, fifty-one bonds of the New York and Pittsburgh Air Line Railroad of a face value of $1,000 each, and $451 in cash.

On the list of officers of the line is John Langdon, of Huntington, Pa., Vice-President and Treasurer. Mr. Langdon said over the telephone at his home in Huntington that he has a brother, Samuel P. Langdon, and didn't know how the possessor of the bonds got them unless he had a right to them. One Samuel P. Langdon, a railroad promoter, is a son of Richard Langdon, who during his lifetime was the wealthiest coal operator in Central Pennsylvania.

Samuel P. Langdon's father's death inherited money and extensive coal interests and built the Altoona and Philadelphia connecting road, which left him almost bankrupt. Last year the road was reorganized under the name of the New York and Pittsburgh Air Line Railroad, when at the head of the Langdon-Wigton Coal Mining Company, had an office here.

When Langdon was president of the United Coaleries Company, with offices in the Drexel Building, Philadelphia, ten years ago, a young woman with whom he had been living was found dead on the floor of her bedroom and Langdon was arrested, but discharged by order of the District Attorney, as there was no evidence against him.

Since her release from Ellis Island Miss Klippenburg had been at the Astor House, registered as Pauline Schmidt. She expressed the belief that her representatives will have no difficulty in gaining her admission to this country under bond when her case comes to trial.

She boarded the Deutschland and is now far on her way from Horace E. Miller, the Newark man against whom she brought suit for $25,000 for breach of promise. She purchased a first-class passage aboard the Deutschland yesterday, when told by an Evening World reporter that she was to be deported.

Miss Klippenburg's breakdown followed a reference to the kindness of the American people and their consideration of her case. She sobbed her regret that Miller's alleged betrayal should have placed her in her present light. She said through an interpreter that she would vindicate herself and begged the fair-minded Americans to withhold judgment.

BISHOP OF LONDON CALLS OUR RICH MEN STEWARDS

Tells Noon Gathering They Will Be Held to Strict Accounting.

OLD TRINITY CROWDED

Lack of Christian Principle
Responsible for Boodling and Justice Miscarried.

The Rt. Rev. Arthur Foley Winnington-Ingram, Lord Bishop of London, sounded a warning to individual and nation in treating the subject of wealth and talents by which one man has the ascendancy over his brother, when he solemnly and in all the statefulness of the robes of the Church of England said:

"To you all, whether you be a financial king or a pauper, I send out this message—Give an account of your stewardship, for you are no longer stewards."

The Bishop spoke today before what was pronounced the largest gathering ever at Trinity Church at noon. Not a seat in the edifice was available a half hour before the head of the English Church appeared under the eaves of Dr. Manning, acting rector of Trinity.

About the church were thousands who were turned away, not a few of them clergymen who were unable to get in even through the rector's entrances.

When the services were over several thousand men picked Broadway from Wall street, and then, on the north side, both sides of the street so densely that it was necessary to halt street-car traffic until the Bishop's carriage moved away.

Promptly at noon the organ began the Introitus hymn. It was followed by the Creed, in which the congregation joined, and then by prayer offered by Dr. Manning. The Bishop presented the figure of an athlete man, tall and angular, with deep, resonant voice and a variety of gestures which he called into service to emphasize his points. He is just middle life, but retains a well-brushed head of gray hair, and a keen, alert and distinctly and rarely paused frequently he repeated whole sentences. Wealth is a Trust for Man's Benefit.

In choosing his text from the Gospels of St. Luke, Chapter xv, verse 6, he selected a thought which seemed to give him freedom in expressing what had evidently struck him in America. "Your wealth is not your own; your property is not your own," he started. "Why, then, should you hold yours above your brother who is not favored by fortune or luck? Can you imagine a good God and a just God and then look about you and see the millions who are burdened with wealth? Is it fair, looking at it your way? No! But looking at it this apparent wrong, we must return to the principles of Christianity, which preaches the lesson of our redemption and the idea of our stewardship."

"You magnates of Wall street, your millions are not your own. You lawyers of fame, your talents are not your own. Christ died for all that. They are held by us in trust for the millions of the poor who have such wealth. God was wise. He gave wealth to a few to hold in trust. They are stewards and must give an account."

Even your religion is not your own. You got that gift from us in the days of the pilgrims. How have you held it in trust? Are you prepared to give an account of your stewardship?"

How to Prevent Boodling.
"All the evils in the world are due to the neglect of the Christian principle that we have, be it wealth or anything else, founded on the fact that Christ died to redeem us and again place him in our hands."

If city officials and government servants would live up to the Christian principle there would be no boodling, no embezzlement of public funds, no broken homes.

"If capital would only desire that its creatures are merely the stewards of what they have there would be no tyranny such as threatens to disrupt the world."

"If magnates and financial kings would only desire their stewardship of the millions there would be no crushed widows and weeping children."

The Way to Avoid Socialism.
"The Bishop spoke of the evil influence exercised by men who take advantage of their fellow men by the use of speech, their popularity, or through their business organizations. Even these professions, he said, are held by them in custody, and they had no right to the right to whip another man. He did not mention the word 'trust,' but the application of his words was obvious to all."

Upon the freedom and joy of living when a man has unburdened himself of the care of millions he spoke at length. He drew the contrast of the busy man, with no responsibilities of wealth and no conscience to trouble him to, relieving others of what money he owns.

Following the sermon the Bishop prayed that the business men of the "two nations" who have acquired wealth be brought to see that they are mere stewards of what they possess, and that socialism and the other evils which have come because financial kings have been the true principle of Christianity be avoided.

His personal opinion of the document, the President laudably said, was "not fit for publication." The promulgation of his approval will be made later.

SHALL SPANKING BE RESTORED TO PUBLIC SCHOOLS?

Some Members of the Board of Education Say It's a Good Thing.

MAXWELL OBJECTS.

Superintendent Declares the Practice Demoralizing Both to Teacher and Pupil.

Shall or shall not the teacher, when taking the pupil on her knee, take him with the obverse side up? The question has been put before the Board of Education by Nathan S. Jonas, a Brooklyn member, who believes that if you spare the rod you greatly increase the danger of smothering the child. It is given to Mr. Jonas to see the light, a spank in time may save nine, and for the teacher it were better to have spanked and lost than never to have spanked at all. In brief and in fine, Mr. Jonas is one who would return to the good old days before we had steam heaters and other modern improvements to the days when every schoolroom had its base-burner.

Hence the following resolution which Mr. Jonas introduced at the meeting of the Board yesterday afternoon: Resolved, That a special committee of three be appointed by the president of the board to inquire and report back to this board whether the abolishment of corporal punishment in public schools has been beneficial or detrimental to maintaining order and respect and that the opinion of the superintendents, principals and teachers of whom inquiry may be made, shall be obtained in writing.

Wants a Small "Big Stick."
Speaking to the resolution Mr. Jonas said the teachers had been coming to him insisting that discipline and lack of order in the schools among the pupils in the public schools of the greater city because the teacher could no longer inflict corporal punishment for offenses affecting the general behavior and saying that the revolt against spanking had been the result of the abolition of the Big Stick—hit-dad-dad to switching dimensions. What did his fellow-members think of it?

They thought pretty well of it. A few wanted to take the resolution on the table, but not to the majority. They voted for an immediate inquiry into the burning question which in days gone by has blistered so many juvenile trousers seats.

For one, the head of the schools does not believe in the spanking as a part of the course of study. To a reporter for The Evening World, Mr. Maxwell said:

Bad for Both, Says Maxwell.
"I am against the proposition to revive flogging in the schools and I will fight it to the extent of my powers. It's decided. It's a thing for the school and for the teacher and even worse thing for the boy or girl."

"Perhaps ordinarily it would not be quite in my province to discuss the school and for the teacher and even worse thing for the boy or girl. I am against the proposition to revive flogging in the schools and I will fight it to the extent of my powers. It's decided. It's a thing for the school and for the teacher and even worse thing for the boy or girl."

"Perhaps ordinarily it would not be quite in my province to discuss the school and for the teacher and even worse thing for the boy or girl. I am against the proposition to revive flogging in the schools and I will fight it to the extent of my powers. It's decided. It's a thing for the school and for the teacher and even worse thing for the boy or girl."

"Perhaps ordinarily it would not be quite in my province to discuss the school and for the teacher and even worse thing for the boy or girl. I am against the proposition to revive flogging in the schools and I will fight it to the extent of my powers. It's decided. It's a thing for the school and for the teacher and even worse thing for the boy or girl."

"Perhaps ordinarily it would not be quite in my province to discuss the school and for the teacher and even worse thing for the boy or girl. I am against the proposition to revive flogging in the schools and I will fight it to the extent of my powers. It's decided. It's a thing for the school and for the teacher and even worse thing for the boy or girl."

"Perhaps ordinarily it would not be quite in my province to discuss the school and for the teacher and even worse thing for the boy or girl. I am against the proposition to revive flogging in the schools and I will fight it to the extent of my powers. It's decided. It's a thing for the school and for the teacher and even worse thing for the boy or girl."

"Perhaps ordinarily it would not be quite in my province to discuss the school and for the teacher and even worse thing for the boy or girl. I am against the proposition to revive flogging in the schools and I will fight it to the extent of my powers. It's decided. It's a thing for the school and for the teacher and even worse thing for the boy or girl."

"Perhaps ordinarily it would not be quite in my province to discuss the school and for the teacher and even worse thing for the boy or girl. I am against the proposition to revive flogging in the schools and I will fight it to the extent of my powers. It's decided. It's a thing for the school and for the teacher and even worse thing for the boy or girl."

"Perhaps ordinarily it would not be quite in my province to discuss the school and for the teacher and even worse thing for the boy or girl. I am against the proposition to revive flogging in the schools and I will fight it to the extent of my powers. It's decided. It's a thing for the school and for the teacher and even worse thing for the boy or girl."

"Perhaps ordinarily it would not be quite in my province to discuss the school and for the teacher and even worse thing for the boy or girl. I am against the proposition to revive flogging in the schools and I will fight it to the extent of my powers. It's decided. It's a thing for the school and for the teacher and even worse thing for the boy or girl."

"Perhaps ordinarily it would not be quite in my province to discuss the school and for the teacher and even worse thing for the boy or girl. I am against the proposition to revive flogging in the schools and I will fight it to the extent of my powers. It's decided. It's a thing for the school and for the teacher and even worse thing for the boy or girl."

"Perhaps ordinarily it would not be quite in my province to discuss the school and for the teacher and even worse thing for the boy or girl. I am against the proposition to revive flogging in the schools and I will fight it to the extent of my powers. It's decided. It's a thing for the school and for the teacher and even worse thing for the boy or girl."

Opera Singer Who Wed Pianist Quietly in London Church To-Day

ANOTHER BANKER ROBBED BY THE SOUND PIRATES

Gang Headed by Woman Carry Cabinet of Silver from the Wiedenfeld Home.

(Special to The Evening World.)
OYSTER BAY, L. I., Sept. 25.—Camille Wiedenfeld, the well-known banker of New York City, who, with his family, is occupying Woodside, the country seat known as the Fanny Adams place, on Lexington avenue here, was robbed early today of a large quantity of solid silverware, including a big cabinet containing valuable pieces of silver in sets which comprised a wedding present to Mr. and Mrs. Wiedenfeld.

The most remarkable part of the burglary was the fact that it would require the combined efforts of four men to remove this cabinet from the house, showing that the robbery was the work of professionals.

Mr. and Mrs. Wiedenfeld were the guests at dinner last night of Mr. and Mrs. Fried at Convent at Cove Neck. When they returned the house was looted for the night and everything apparently made secure. It is believed that the robbery occurred just after midnight. Entrance was effected through the cellar room.

There were two big dogs on the premises, and there are evidences that they were chloroformed.

A quantity of plated silverware which had been tested by the thieves was found on the floor.

The robbery was not discovered until this morning, when the local police force, which constitutes one man, Charles Townsend, was notified and he is now working on the case.

This is thought to be the work of the pirate burglars who have been operating in the summer months at Bay Ridge, Westchester and other places. They have a woman in the gang and get away with their booty by means of an automobile which is later taken to a rowboat on the Sound. This is the third burglary of the kind in the Sound. The last one being at the summer house of John A. Weeks.

This morning a racing automobile of the runaway type was discovered in a ditch near Woodbury completely destroyed by fire, as the possible result of an explosion. Not even the number of the car was left intact. No one heard the explosion, and the accident is being investigated in complete mystery.

The only clue to the singular discovery was a telephone from Garden City received by Dr. David Doughty, a veterinarian, asking him to look up, or the automobile, which was believed by the residents of Woodbury that the party in the automobile, which contained four seats, were racing along the depot road toward the railroad station, lost their bearings, and went into the ditch.

There was no evidence, that any member of the party was seen, but they got away and why they did not ask for assistance is a mystery.

It is not believed that the automobile was in any way connected with the Wiedenfeld robbery.

NEW YORK GIRL OF 12 PRISONER IN PANAMA DEN

Met by Woman on Way to School in Harlem and Lured
Away, Says Missionary.

HELD CAPTIVE THERE.

Conditions on the Isthmus Pictured by Miss Johnson
as Appalling.

That a twelve-year-old New York girl was lured from this city by a woman and is held prisoner in a house in Panama, is the extraordinary story told by Miss Johnson, a missionary from the Isthmus, who is here raising funds to fight vice in the Canal Zone. Miss Johnson attempted to rescue the child, but was met by the inmates of the house in Colon and driven away by force, while the police did nothing.

She told the story last evening at a meeting of the New York County Women's Christian Temperance Union, at the One Hundred and Forty-sixth street mission. She pictured conditions on the Isthmus as simply horrible. She said, "The child was met by the inmates of the house in Colon and driven away by force, while the police did nothing."

She told the story last evening at a meeting of the New York County Women's Christian Temperance Union, at the One Hundred and Forty-sixth street mission. She pictured conditions on the Isthmus as simply horrible. She said, "The child was met by the inmates of the house in Colon and driven away by force, while the police did nothing."

She told the story last evening at a meeting of the New York County Women's Christian Temperance Union, at the One Hundred and Forty-sixth street mission. She pictured conditions on the Isthmus as simply horrible. She said, "The child was met by the inmates of the house in Colon and driven away by force, while the police did nothing."

She told the story last evening at a meeting of the New York County Women's Christian Temperance Union, at the One Hundred and Forty-sixth street mission. She pictured conditions on the Isthmus as simply horrible. She said, "The child was met by the inmates of the house in Colon and driven away by force, while the police did nothing."

She told the story last evening at a meeting of the New York County Women's Christian Temperance Union, at the One Hundred and Forty-sixth street mission. She pictured conditions on the Isthmus as simply horrible. She said, "The child was met by the inmates of the house in Colon and driven away by force, while the police did nothing."

She told the story last evening at a meeting of the New York County Women's Christian Temperance Union, at the One Hundred and Forty-sixth street mission. She pictured conditions on the Isthmus as simply horrible. She said, "The child was met by the inmates of the house in Colon and driven away by force, while the police did nothing."

She told the story last evening at a meeting of the New York County Women's Christian Temperance Union, at the One Hundred and Forty-sixth street mission. She pictured conditions on the Isthmus as simply horrible. She said, "The child was met by the inmates of the house in Colon and driven away by force, while the police did nothing."

She told the story last evening at a meeting of the New York County Women's Christian Temperance Union, at the One Hundred and Forty-sixth street mission. She pictured conditions on the Isthmus as simply horrible. She said, "The child was met by the inmates of the house in Colon and driven away by force, while the police did nothing."

She told the story last evening at a meeting of the New York County Women's Christian Temperance Union, at the One Hundred and Forty-sixth street mission. She pictured conditions on the Isthmus as simply horrible. She said, "The child was met by the inmates of the house in Colon and driven away by force, while the police did nothing."

She told the story last evening at a meeting of the New York County Women's Christian Temperance Union, at the One Hundred and Forty-sixth street mission. She pictured conditions on the Isthmus as simply horrible. She said, "The child was met by the inmates of the house in Colon and driven away by force, while the police did nothing."

She told the story last evening at a meeting of the New York County Women's Christian Temperance Union, at the One Hundred and Forty-sixth street mission. She pictured conditions on the Isthmus as simply horrible. She said, "The child was met by the inmates of the house in Colon and driven away by force, while the police did nothing."

She told the story last evening at a meeting of the New York County Women's Christian Temperance Union, at the One Hundred and Forty-sixth street mission. She pictured conditions on the Isthmus as simply horrible. She said, "The child was met by the inmates of the house in Colon and driven away by force, while the police did nothing."

She told the story last evening at a meeting of the New York County Women's Christian Temperance Union, at the One Hundred and Forty-sixth street mission. She pictured conditions on the Isthmus as simply horrible. She said, "The child was met by the inmates of the house in Colon and driven away by force, while the police did nothing."

She told the story last evening at a meeting of the New York County Women's Christian Temperance Union, at the One Hundred and Forty-sixth street mission. She pictured conditions on the Isthmus as simply horrible. She said, "The child was met by the inmates of the house in Colon and driven away by force, while the police did nothing."

She told the story last evening at a meeting of the New York County Women's Christian Temperance Union, at the One Hundred and Forty-sixth street mission. She pictured conditions on the Isthmus as simply horrible. She said, "The child was met by the inmates of the house in Colon and driven away by force, while the police did nothing."

She told the story last evening at a meeting of the New York County Women's Christian Temperance Union, at the One Hundred and Forty-sixth street mission. She pictured conditions on the Isthmus as simply horrible. She said, "The child was met by the inmates of the house in Colon and driven away by force, while the police did nothing."

She told the story last evening at a meeting of the New York County Women's Christian Temperance Union, at the One Hundred and Forty-sixth street mission. She pictured conditions on the Isthmus as simply horrible. She said, "The child was met by the inmates of the house in Colon and driven away by force, while the police did nothing."

She told the story last evening at a meeting of the New York County Women's Christian Temperance Union, at the One Hundred and Forty-sixth street mission. She pictured conditions on the Isthmus as simply horrible. She said, "The child was met by the inmates of the house in Colon and driven away by force, while the police did nothing."

She told the story last evening at a meeting of the New York County Women's Christian Temperance Union, at the One Hundred and Forty-sixth street mission. She pictured conditions on the Isthmus as simply horrible. She said, "The child was met by the inmates of the house in Colon and driven away by force, while the police did nothing."

She told the story last evening at a meeting of the New York County Women's Christian Temperance Union, at the One Hundred and Forty-sixth street mission. She pictured conditions on the Isthmus as simply horrible. She said, "The child was met by the inmates of the house in Colon and driven away by force, while the police did nothing."

She told the story last evening at a meeting of the New York County Women's Christian Temperance Union, at the One Hundred and Forty-sixth street mission. She pictured conditions on the Isthmus as simply horrible. She said, "The child was met by the inmates of the house in Colon and driven away by force, while the police did nothing."

She told the story last evening at a meeting of the New York County Women's Christian Temperance Union, at the One Hundred and Forty-sixth street mission. She pictured conditions on the Isthmus as simply horrible. She said, "The child was met by the inmates of the house in Colon and driven away by force, while the police did nothing."

She told the story last evening at a meeting of the New York County Women's Christian Temperance Union, at the One Hundred and Forty-sixth street mission. She pictured conditions on the Isthmus as simply horrible. She said, "The child was met by the inmates of the house in Colon and driven away by force, while the police did nothing."

She told the story last evening at a meeting of the New York County Women's Christian Temperance Union, at the One Hundred and Forty-sixth street mission. She pictured conditions on the Isthmus as simply horrible. She said, "The child was met by the inmates of the house in Colon and driven away by force, while the police did nothing."

She told the story last evening at a meeting of the New York County Women's Christian Temperance Union, at the One Hundred and Forty-sixth street mission. She pictured conditions on the Isthmus as simply horrible. She said, "The child was met by the inmates of the house in Colon and driven away by force, while the police did nothing."

She told the story last evening at a meeting of the New York County Women's Christian Temperance Union, at the One Hundred and Forty-sixth street mission. She pictured conditions on the Isthmus as simply horrible. She said, "The child was met by the inmates of the house in Colon